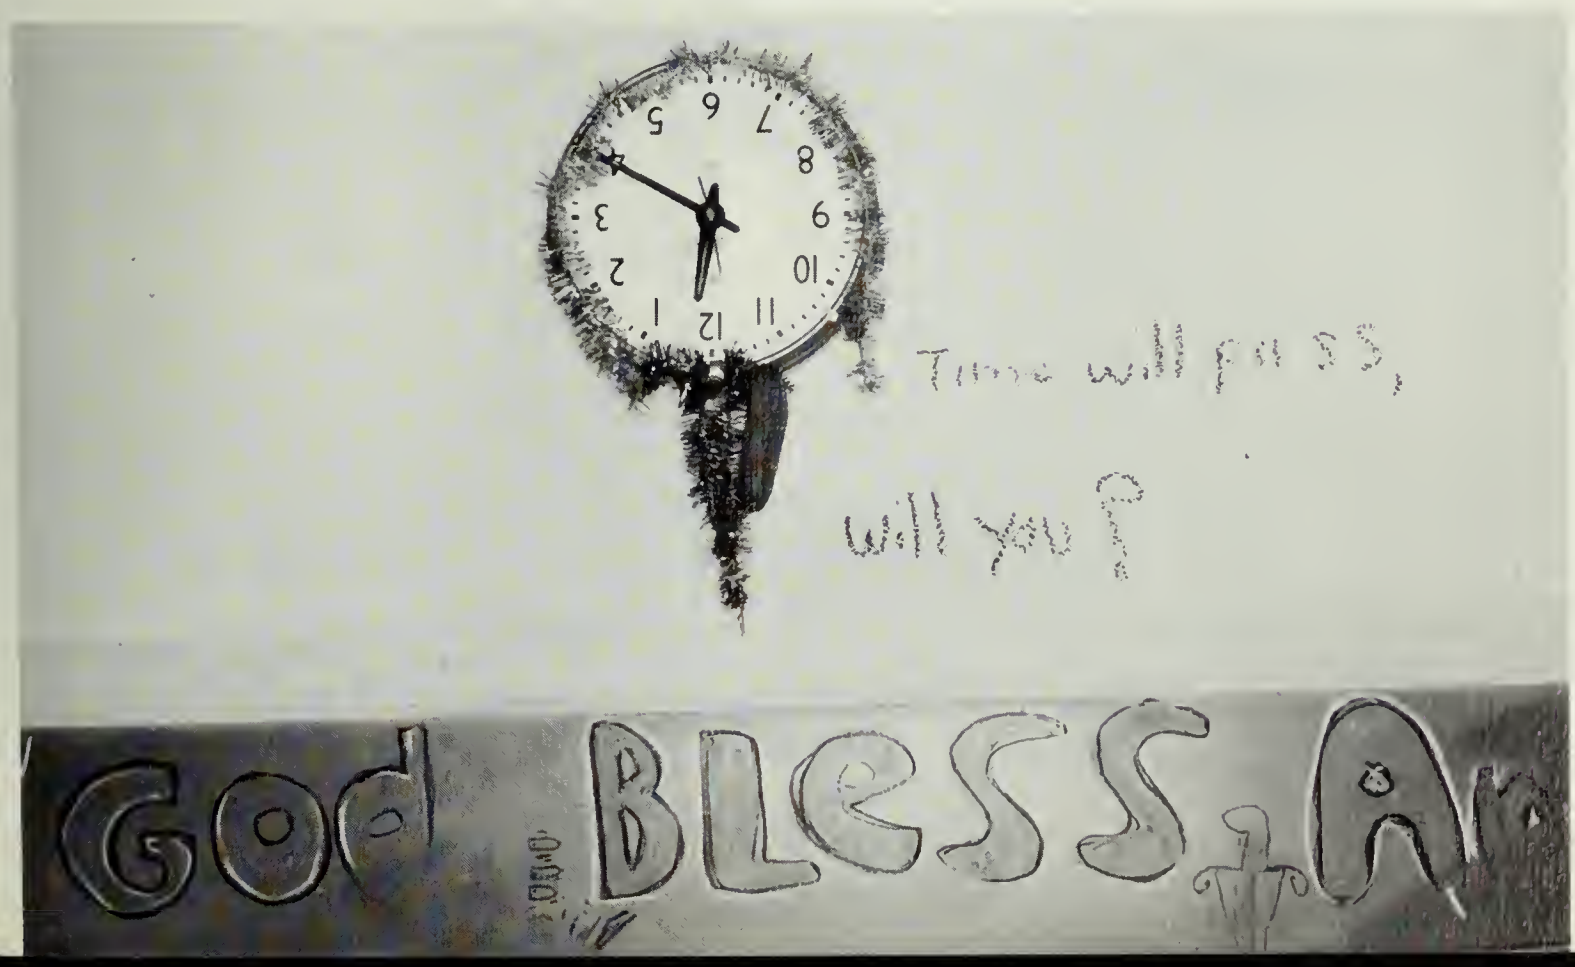
A great match of skill??

Yum.

Ouch!

A time to remember.



Quick, before we get caught.

The longest walk.

It's not yours yet.

Old friends.

The class of '71 as they stood—for two hours in fact.

Going up?

A long look at a worn path.

ACT TWO SCENE ONE

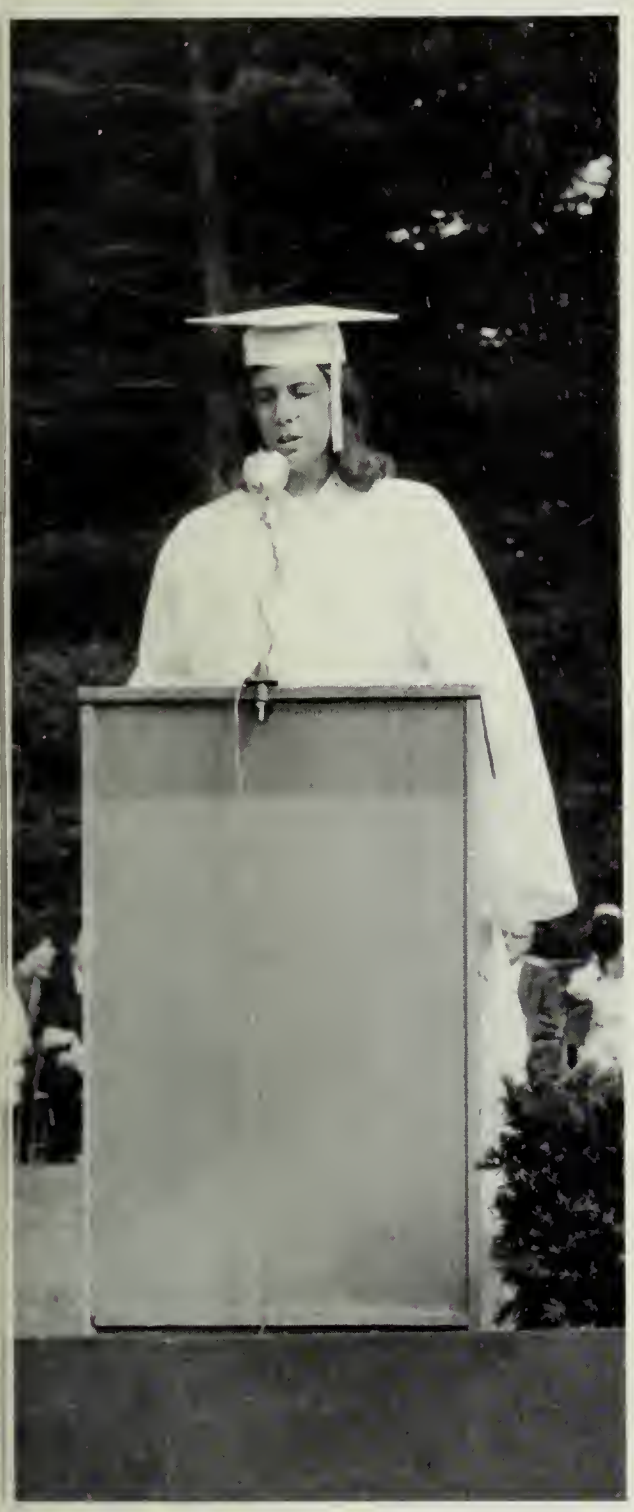
Graduation is finally here. After twelve long years of education, it is all over, right? No, definitely not. For some of us, high school graduation is only an end to one long chapter of our formal education. We will continue this education again in the fall in college, business school, or nursing school. Some of us have finished our formal educations and have jobs or marriage waiting in the near future. But in either case, whether or not education in a formal sense is waiting, we will all continue to learn. We cannot and do not close our minds because we have finished high school. Learning is a continuing process that began when we were born and will end only when we die.

Perhaps now we feel confident and experienced because we are graduating. But we have not even begun to learn anything of our world. Learning is not necessarily linked with books. A child learns to crawl; a man learns to reason. Learning is a process that is intricately linked with the day to day experience of living. We have had twelve years of learning from books, but we have never has the experience necessary to test what we have learned. We have the tools—we have learned to read, write, and maybe think. What we build with these implements, however, depends on future experience and learning outside of our now relatively sheltered lives. We criticize our parents and their generation for their politics and policies. We oppose them vehemently on issues such as Vietnam. But when our turn comes, what will we do? Will we make the same mistakes that we feel our parents did? Were these really mistakes? We now know the rules of the game, but we will never know how the game is actually played until we play it ourselves.

As we leave high school, we are not ending our education. We should be just beginning it. We have to learn to get along with friends and neighbors, and to build lasting relationships with people. We have to make places for ourselves inside, or outside of society, as we choose. We have to become aware and interested in where our nation is going so that as citizens of a democracy, we can exercise fully the rights that are ours. It is impossible to close our minds to our world merely because we are graduating. We can sit here, though, and think of freedom from teachers and homework. However, now the responsibility of learning is solely our own. Instead of being satisfied with what we know, we should be awed by what we do not. Our real education should be just beginning.

Ann Lombard

SALUTATORY



CAUGHT BETWEEN TWO WORLDS

I would like to welcome you all to the graduation exercises of our class of 1971.

Many of us have been talking incessantly of May 14, the end of school, graduation, marriage, jobs, and college. We just could not wait until we could leave school. The moment is now here—why were we so anxious? To get out of school? I don't think so—I think we did want to escape the enforced security of school life, but many of us have a lot to look forward to during the summer and next fall. This makes the end of school seem unimportant. It's just a phase that we all must go through before we can begin the rest of our lives.

I felt this way until about a month ago when I attended a wedding shower for a girl in the Senior class. Everything hit me there—that girl is going to be married and spend the rest of her life with someone. We are graduating and will go our separate ways; there will be some of our friends whom we will never see again. I then began to see graduation with a different degree of importance.

Though our lives are diverging, we all have something in common. We are going to face a challenge. We will have to face decisions as to what we will do: getting full-time jobs, serving in the Armed Forces, getting married, or going to college.

These challenges all have certain requirements for the individual. Self-discipline, maturity, knowledge of ourselves and our capabilities, and the desire to accomplish our goals. Many factors influence the growth of these qualities, education playing perhaps the largest with regard to self-discipline and knowledge of our capabilities. Parents and teachers try to guide us in finding knowledge of ourselves and the desire to accomplish our goals. The teacher's job is finished—we must wait for the result.

Very few of us can know if we are ready to make these decisions. Shortly we shall all know. We must rely on everything that we have been taught by our teachers and parents and the influence of our peers. Many of our fears of the future are based on the doubt: are we ready for the world?

Graduation is a plunge into the unknown. Being young and not really aware of the problems that will arise, we rush head first into a different world. The sheltered world we have known is gone; a new one with many uncertainties is here.

We must learn to cope with each problem as it arises and gain confidence from experience. As we learn, we will mature, our base being twelve years of education and eighteen years of growing up now completed. We can only hope that our preparation has been strong enough.

Today, as we say good-bye to our friends and wish them good luck, let's look back on our twelve years of schooling and then look forward, feeling confident that we are ready for the world.

ESSAY

THE GREATEST, MOST IMPORTANT DIFFICULTY

What does "to have an education" mean? Is it of a book learning nature, or is education knowledge and experience? Does it mean memorizing details for a mark to pass a course to graduate, or is education the desire for a mark to pass a course to graduate, or is education the desire to learn to develop the whole being? One thing is certain: to exist in society, some sort of basic education is needed. . . . In the words of Montaigne, a sixteenth century individualist: "the greatest and most important difficulty of human effort is the. . . . education of children."

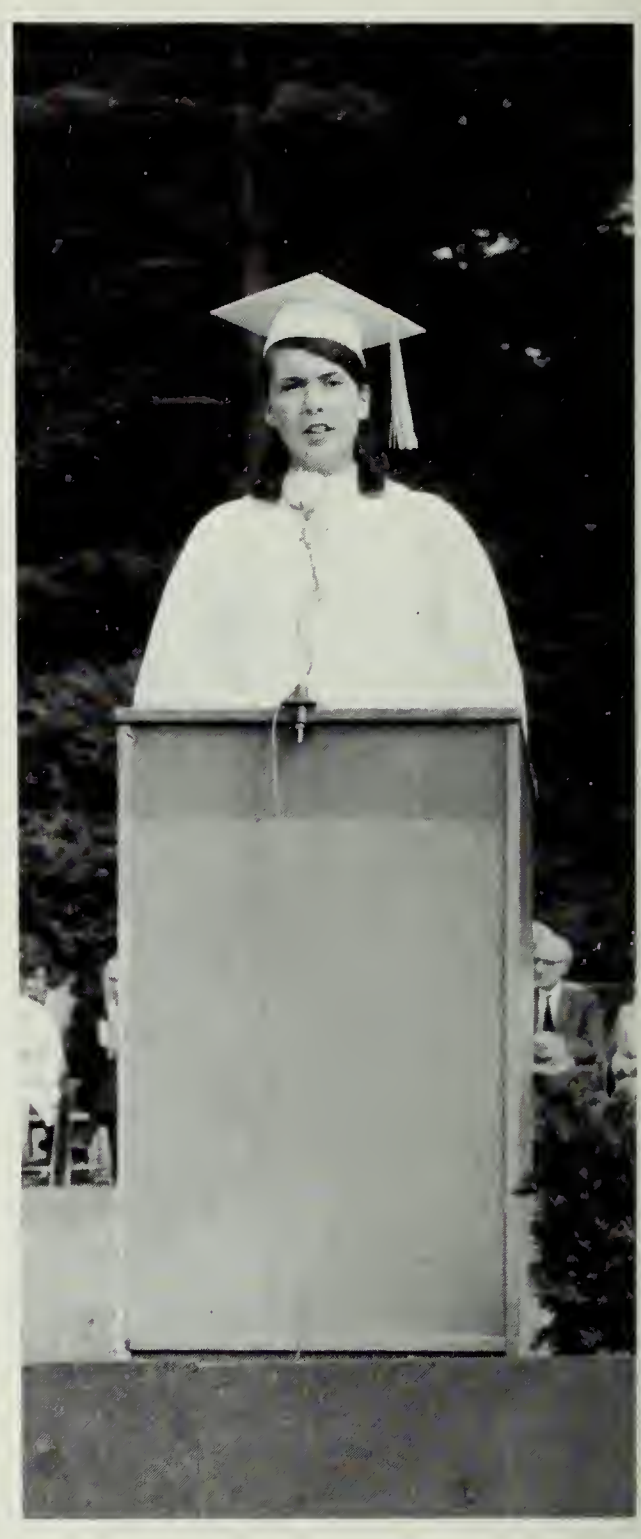
The fundamentals of an education involve such skills as reading and comprehension, and writing. These skills must be taught in order to be able to continue in education. The early years should establish the foundation for the years of education in the future. However, there is a point of saturation where an individual has had all the basics needed. Then he should be given the free will to develop creativity and individuality. This allowance for individuality should be an integral part of education. Forcing a student to do certain things in a narrow range tends to limit and inhibit his ability. "By depriving a pupil of liberty to do things for himself, we make him servile and cowardly." (Montaigne) The student can only play back the ideas of the teacher and the subject he is compelled to digest.

In today's system it seems that education places more of a stress on "book learning" and on competing for a grade of 93 instead of a 92. Emphasis is placed not on what the student may learn but on how he performs and what his mark is. Education now means more of a memorizing for a mark for a short while, then forgetting the substance of the material after the test. Memorizing is without use; "to know by heart only is not to know it all, it is simply to keep what one has committed to memory." (Montaigne) Education, in many cases, means existing through boredom for a souvenir, a piece of paper, designating graduation and readiness for life.

However, education should encompass the whole individual. It should not only involve the person's mind, but his thoughts and actions, his relation to other ideas and to other people. Education should be a learning experience and a development of person and spirit. Montaigne said that education should be a "desiring . . . to form an able and efficient man (rather) than a learned man." What use would there be of a formal education in life?

The practicality of an education should also be an influence. There is no use teaching a student something he will never use. If a student is taught a subject that is completely irrelevant to his life and future, then the time used to teach the material is wasted. If the material cannot in any way contribute to the development of an individual, it is without value for all concerned.

Education should not be an exercise just in memory or reciting the alphabet, but an exercise in learning and judgment, sense and substance. It should entail the whole spirit; it should influence the person's life and his role in society. Education should foster wisdom and judgment to "bare and mere literal learning." (Montaigne)



The diploma should signify not wasted years of useless memorizing, but years taken to develop a whole, rounded person. This graduation exercise should mean more than a "good riddance" to years in a confinement of irrelevancy; it should mean a greeting to a new and perhaps better way of life as a result of suitable preparation. Almost everyone leaving here today should have a feeling of individuality and readiness to join, or tackle, life. Maybe a few do. But perhaps because of the present day system of education many cannot claim this, through no fault of their own. We would be remiss in our obligations to society if we did not strive to make education better for those students yet to come.

CLASS WILL

We have made it! Four years of Barney's capricious moods, four years of Mr. Garrett's meditation, four years of gym, four years of lockers and ten o'clock breaks, four years of band, four years of art, four years of business, four years of teachers, four years of those cafe lunches, four years of hockey, track, baseball, football, basketball . . . four horrible years. To those horrible years we leave the CLASS WILL of 1971.

Sally leaves behind one pair of white (?) sneakers, two pairs of unmatched socks, and one sweatshirt to Miss McCarthy. Margo Landry leaves her memories to the teachers. Kathy Whitney leaves all baby knowledge to Mrs. Kanchuga. Donna Robinson leaves thanks to Mrs. Kanchuga for making her realize the importance of being a young lady. Cindy Jensen leaves one big kiss to Mr. Malay. Gary Whitcomb leaves an old algebra II book and a book on classroom self-defense to anyone unfortunate enough to have Mr. Kelley. Dawn MacGillivray leaves Mr. Cogan smiling. Joyce Vecchiarelli leaves Mr. Kelley her pills. Lori Suggs leaves her teabag to Mr. Kelley. Steve Parsons leaves shears to Mr. Cripps. Patricia Winters leaves Mr. Kelley's homework sheet to anyone who finishes their homework. Don Harrison leaves a copy of EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT GENO DISARCINA BUT WERE AFRAID TO ASK. Mal Reitchel leaves Kule her bowl of fruit and her art work. Kurt Hinxman returns all authority to Mr. Lentige in his Graphic Arts Class. William Briggs leaves the promise to take Miss Kule's job away—also to make her return all the paintings she's borrowed from him. Pamela Maison leaves Miss Kule all the respect she ever wanted. Donna Jordon leaves Mrs. Kanchuga a Betty Crocker Cookbook. Kathy Smith leaves a 10 pound bag of mints to the cute teacher in Room 207. John Kleynan leaves his little brother to the teachers. Diane Robichaud leaves all her spare time spent in the halls, in the front of 213 with Ken to Mr. D. Holly Rice leaves Miss Haitas her old double blade skates. Susan Adams leaves her insanity to Mr. Gary Nelson, who needs it—he's too sane. Kathy Smith leaves a book of HOW TO TEACH SENSITIVITY TO THE WEATHERMEN to Mrs. Cronin. Karen Lesnik leaves 25c worth of candy bars to Miss Dadoly. Steve Parsons leaves a bowl of lasagna to Geno. Kathy Whitney leaves her P.O.D. papers and laughs to Mr. D. Carol Freeman leaves her "congenial" personality to Mr. Lynch, her favorite teacher. Mary Ann Morlani leaves Mr. Fessenden without remorse. Robert Lyford leaves his collection of Doonesbury comic strips to Fred and BKM. Sid Tildsley would like to leave a third Tildsley coming up next year to Miss Abbood. Debby White leaves all her problems to Miss Abbood. James Gum leaves all the headaches that his class gave Mr. McDermott this year. Thomas Beaton leaves his number one rating in the table top hockey to Geno. S. F. and L. B. leave Mr. Fardy a clean large notebook for any new notes for next years' classes. Donna Jordan leaves Mrs. Partlow a sewing needle. Robin Moore leaves Mr. Cogan with another Moore the next three years.

Rachael Palmer leaves 57 rolls of masking tape and 400 cardboard boxes to the art room. Gail Parent leaves her seat in the art room which she used for four years. Fran Baker leaves her seat in Miss Kule's room for any freshman who wishes to use it for four years in a row.

Gloria Marsh leaves one used chair in 208-A. Kathy Smith leaves one uncensored copy of HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS to Chuck and George. Debra Sevener gladly leaves Mrs. Gershon to any student fortunate enough to have her. Denise Bureau leaves her typewriter that she used for four hours a day to anyone who wants it. Janis Field leaves all her shorthand tests and quizzes to the freshman in 202. Diane Robichaud leaves a considerable number of zeroes for being late for Mr. Shiere's class to future bookkeeping students who will give him the same trouble. Sandy O'Rourke leaves her statistical typing book to George. Dawn MacGillivray leaves Mrs. Gershon to worry about Mrs. Webber. Jan Rosa leaves a bottle of tranquilizers and a package of Contac to any brave student of Room 208-A. Joyce Lippert leaves her statistical typing booklet to anyone who wants it. Nancy Schultz leaves her statistical typing booklet to the students in 208-A. Peggy Vayo leaves a warning to all those who like to talk with their friends above a whisper in front of Mrs. Webber's room at 10:05. Michelle LaValle leaves behind to all third year business students the boredom and monotony of staying in the same classroom—same seat—four periods in a row, and the near impossibility of skipping a business class—unless the teacher breaks her ribs and is out for three weeks.

Patty Kelley leaves to sister BJ a pair of crutches if she wants to try out for basketball cheerleading. John Daniell leaves his speediness to the track team. Thomas Mirisola leaves one "oops" to Coach Gilligan to be used in whatever way he sees fit. Rich Smallidge leaves two knee braces to anyone unfortunate enough to need them. James Ritchie leaves his football shirt for coach's trophy case. Jim Irwin leaves a lead puck (to practice his meager shots) and a pair of smelly hockey gloves to John Harrison. Richard Weed leaves his track shoes for someone who can put them to good use. Walter Hills leaves his football uniform to any guy who can wear it with as much pride as he did. Harry Latta leaves his right soccer shoe to Frank Simmons to put to use. Dennis Murphy leaves to Phil Morrissey one pair of striped sneakers so that he can slip all over the court, just like Dennis did. Thomas Mirisola leaves to next year's varsity center fielder the hole in his baseball glove. David Irwin leaves his three front teeth and a lisp to any unfortunate future hockey player. Dick Gillis and Mike Curran would like to leave the 100 different ways they used to get out of track practices. Gary Whitcomb leaves a pair of worn-out track shoes to anyone who can break 2:10 in the 880 during his senior year. Walter Hills leaves his football locker #5 to anybody crazy enough to want it.

Trudy Kennedy leaves all her skip days to her sister Patty. Robin Moore leaves all her medical excuses to any girl fortunate enough to have them. Marcia Carbone leaves her absentee record to Mary Cote or anyone who can fulfill it. Gail Provenzano and Cathy Worth leave their luck in skipping and not getting caught to some unlucky student at WHS. Dale, Gloria, and Patty leave eighteen straight days of being late to anyone who can do better than that. Barbara Flores, Kathy Ingalls and Brenda Graves leave their exceptionally good luck at skipping to anyone who thinks they can do better. They also leave a reserved seat in the 8:02—which made it all possible.

Denise Lavine leaves her left gym sock to Patty and her right gym sock to Betty. Kathy Whitney leaves her gym suit and sneakers to Miss MacCarthy. Debbie Day leaves her gym locker combination, 36-24-36, to anyone who fits the qualifications. Brenda Sheldon leaves one slightly dirty gym suit and one slightly dirty gym locker (#392) to next year's freshman. Robert Welch leaves his gym suit to Coach Bellissimo—he may be able to fit into it someday. Scott Sheerin leaves 582,163 push-ups for Meatball. Gail Provenzano leaves her smelly old gym suit to any person who gets stuck without one in time of need. Frank Carroll leaves his gym suit to Fred. Patty Kelley leaves her locker room tape recordings for all girls. Holly Rice leaves all her socks to next year's gym class. Rhonda Carlin leaves gym locker #169 to some poor freshman.

Sally F. leaves her broken locker to any worthy freshman. Diane Burke leaves her decorated locker to some lucky freshman—"decorate and cherish it always." Margo Landry leaves Eddie her locker. Marcia Carbone leaves Debbie Tomasi her locker. Mal Reitchel leaves Eddie his locker. Linda Place leaves locker #553 to some poor freshman or sophomore. It opens with a good hard kick. Gloria Marsh leaves two unused lockers. Dennis MacCallum leaves a locker of unreturned library books. Amy Anderson leaves her locker to any freshman who will be willing to fight with the office to get it to work. Harry Stewart leaves his locker to someone who is either a lot more patient than he, or an expert safe-cracker. Pam Bacon leaves locker #300 to some poor unsuspecting freshman. It closes quite easily—with a kick and a bang. Jackie Micalizzi leaves a foot-stool for those under 5'2" with a top locker. Elaine Thorp leaves her locker to the freshman. Bill Mardney leaves one locker full of unused books to anyone. James Ritchie leaves his locker to anyone who wants it.

Terri O'Connors leaves her brother, Jimmy, under the guidance of Michael Harrington and Mr. Cogan. Sally Fantasia leaves her football cheerleading uniform to her sister, Marie. Gloria Smith leaves to her brother and sisters a pack of gum, a waste basket, a scraper and a worn-out map of the school in case of Mr. Kelley. Patti Kelley leaves BJ two years of being profound for Mrs. Aldrich—if she can take it. Amy Anderson leaves her sister and brother the right to be tardy. Mal Reitchel leaves Room 225 to her brother Jackie. Don Harrison leaves complete control of the school and faculty to his brother, Doug and to his sister, Chen. Maureen Given leaves her sister, Gayle, her father's signature—to sign her own notes. Leslie Dluznieski leaves her sister four long years at WHS. Lousie Baker leaves boring POD classes with Geno to her sisters. Sue Barry leaves a year of Mr. D's classes to her brother, Paul.

Mal Reitchel leaves the small cafe to whoever wants it. James Gum leaves the cafe all the good lunches we made this year. Margo Landry leaves all the pieces of lunch on the floor to the cafe. Kurt Hinxman leaves all the senior's recipes to the cafe. Richard Carter leaves those cafe lunches to future classes. Susan Adams leaves Terry's and her lunch seat to Michele L. and David D. Also she leaves her lunch table to Lois, Cherry, Sandy, and Jeannie, with a brown paper bag for their squashed milk cartons. Brenda Locke leaves the cafe's job to dishpan hands. Joe Mullins leaves one book of 1,000 recipes even more disgusting than the ones they already have. Dawn MacGillivray leaves creamed spinach soup to the cafe and WHS—forever! Joyce Vecchiarelli leaves her gourmet lunches to Mrs. "Thelma" Wentworth.

Margo Landry leaves a pack of cigarettes to the 215 girls' room. Karen Heim leaves all her cigarette butts in the parking lot. Margaret D'Errico leaves the air vents in the 215 girls' room to all those that go in there to smoke—but don't get caught. Linda Adams leaves her smoking stall in the 215 girls' room to anyone who wants it. Joyce Vecchiarelli leaves her "puffs" to Patty, Betty, Hen, and Parker.

Hugh Wiberg leaves one bent baritone. Elaine Burpee leaves a pair of wrecked tassles and a broken up baton to some poor majorette. Gary Whitcomb leaves a tenor sax to Dave Passmore—if he can ever find Middle C. Holly Rice leaves one pair of tympani mallets and the title section leader to Mr. Menzie's next unsuspecting soul.

R. W. leaves his two new bald tires he smoked in the High School parking lot. Kathy Knowlton leaves her parking space to Patty. She also leaves her 1960 Falcon to any underclassman who can start it in 90 degree weather without using the choke. Denise Lavine leaves her banged-up car to anybody who goes to drive-ins and has poles in front of them. Joyce Vecchiarelli leaves her tailpipe, oil, and empty gauge.

Bill Gustus leaves Milt Famie to all incoming freshmen who have never heard of him. Donna Jordon leaves her books to the "little freshman" to use in years to come. James Gum leaves all his excellent essays to his English class. Gloria Marsh leaves one pair of old clunky glasses to anyone. John Kleynan leaves his sympathy to the junior and senior shop class next year while they build the house. Terri O'Connors leaves Anne Polsey and Lorraine Lemieux taxi fare. Harry Latta leaves his broken Hart Javelin skiis to anybody that thinks he can ski on them. Phil Butler leaves a can of Nutrament to Bern Wagstaff. Diane Burke leaves an advanced activity period class. Lance Platt leaves his grapefruit. Brian Farrell leaves his locker, books, desks, and teachers to the poor lower classmen. Kathy Leary leaves Alison Arnold a tube of Ben-Gay for pulled leg muscles. Cindy Jensen leaves one slightly used balloon to whoever can use it. Ted Wicks leaves special brownies for Buffalo Bob. Pamela Maison leaves Mr. Dicey to any kool and unsuspecting chick. Lance Walden leaves his gym socks to his teachers and the school. Judy Boeri leaves an unorganized dues book and an advanced activity class II. Ho Chi leaves behind his secret identity—Kevin McCormick. Cindy Balcom leaves her Mickey Mouse sweatshirt to anyone who cares to wash it. Ann Stantial leaves her ability to stay awake the whole sleep-out, then coming to school, and facing the left, left, left, left, left of graduation practice. Jackie Cawthron leaves her mouth—she talks fast—to anyone who can use it as a conning machine as she has. Tony DeFrancesco gives away all his physics knowledge and the crown to anyone who can get a lower grade. Sandi O'Rourke leaves three long years of waiting to Terri. Bill McGinley leaves Ann Stantial and her kisses to next year's senior class play. Lance and Shannon each leave Riccelli three inches. Carl Capozzi leaves all his charm and talents through experience to the immature students coming up. Dana Tighe leaves his excellent study habits to any unfortunate that feels like just getting by. Linn Wiberg leaves her penchant for obnoxious, ridiculous rules to some integrity-filled junior. Steve Catalano and Linda Valente leave behind two pairs of extremely worn out boxing gloves to any loving couple who love to argue day in and day out. They also leave behind all the happy times they had together between rounds. Louise Baker leaves 101 ways to spend lonely weekends to anyone who is in love with servicemen. Mal Reitchel leaves himself memories. Arthur Barnaby leaves his girl, Debra, to NO ONE. Donna Jordan leaves all her school memories to WHS. Steve Parsons leaves some good memories and some bad memories. Margo Landry leaves Ed to the freshman. Debra Sevener leaves all the trouble they caused and the fun they had causing it, to Russo, and I hope she can double it. D. T. leaves a chain of beer can tabs for Mr. Cripps clock. Patty Kelley leaves Frank to any deserving underclassman. Mal Reitchel leaves Gayle Given to Eddie Landry. Kathy Sugrue leaves Cheryl Tomasi her drafting pencil and eraser, and she hopes Cheryl has fun in drafting next year. Debra Sevener leaves all the good times she had with Steve in memory of him, my friends, and me. She also leaves all the good times she could have had to Kathy Cain. Lee Hobby leaves a pair of slightly used saddle shoes to Donna Brewster and a $10 gift certificate at any Jacob Finklestein Store.

Frank Gruber leaves three bottles of turtle wax to a certain member of the School to keep his chrome dome shining. Richard Carter leaves Kathy Whitney's, if she will give it to him, to Barney for those cold days. Sandi O'Rourke leaves her three suspension rooms to anyone who wants them. Margo Landry leaves all her books and D-sheets to the school. Cynthia Johns leaves the big bow tie that was used in the JV show to Mr. Garrett. Dawn MacGillivray leaves a moment of silent meditation to students waiting to see Mr. Garrett. Arthur Barnaby leaves his seniority to Mr. Garrett. Richard Carter leaves Mr. Garrett to the Junior class.

Steve Parsons leaves graduation practice. Leslie Dluznieski leaves all the good times of being at the end of the graduation line to all future senior girls who are tall. Kathy Walsh leaves school. William DeLisle leaves this school. Leida Rideout leaves the whole school, good points and bad, to incoming students. Monica Gilardi leaves Wilmington High School—as fast as she can. Mal Reitchel leaves 215 and 115 to whoever takes care of them. Linda Place leaves the remainders of WHS to anyone who wants them. And finally, Robin Meads leaves the country to anybody who wants it.

We the class of 1971, being of unorganized soundness, and doubtful sanity leave—ONE LAST QUOTE. . .

Susan Adams admits at last that she is of "shapeless body and insane mind."

CLASS HISTORY

I guess the actual history of the class of 1971 dates back to 1953 when 25 babies came screaming into the world. Little did we know at that time that on September 3, 1966, we would be entering Wilmington High School together as freshmen.

The sun was shining down on us that September morning as we proudly, yet hesitatingly, entered the building and began to wind a maze that was to lead us to many new and enlightening experiences that would shape our future.

With Mr. Grecoe as our class advisor, we held our first class meeting in November. "What's it all about?" seemed to be the thematic question. At this time, nomination papers were circulated for class elections. Carl Capozzi was chosen president; Sid Tildsley, vice president; Marie Ricci, secretary and Mike Landers, treasurer. It was now that the very able, yet not always welcomed, dues collectors began their work.

It was during our freshman year that Girls' basketball witnessed a number one victory. Football really stepped into the limelight though as the team witnessed its first in a series of three number one victories. To think our freshman class held some of the key players. Mike Espisito, Dick Gillis, and Rick Smallidge started to capture everyone's attention. We had made many lasting friendships and learned to feel at home as our freshman year came to a close.

As the leaves turned brown a few months later, we found ourselves once more safely under the roof of Wilmington High, this time as sophomores. We still looked up at the seniors and juniors, of course we won't even mention those "little" freshmen.

Miss Dolkart was our class advisor that year, and after elections, at the end of October, Sid Tildsley became president; Mike Curran, vice president; Joan Cuoco, secretary; and Bill Gustus, treasurer. With these four at the reins, our sophomore class dance was planned for December eighteenth. The "Crystal Ball," as the dance was called, was held in the gym. "The Lost Generation," was the band that played.

This year, the hockey team, with stars Mike Esposito, Jim Irwin, and Dana Tighe, joined the football team to become the number one champions from our league.

In May, we held another class meeting to decide on a location for our Junior Prom. The Speare House in Lowell was chosen. It was also at this meeting that sophomore Crazy Day was planned.

On June fifth, as a prelude to Crazy Day a sophomore class party was held at Silver Lake. A sleep out followed the party. On June sixth, Crazy Day had its beginning as two hundred uninhibited sophomores paraded from the Little League Park to the High School. So we had seen a second year fleetingly pass as our Sophomore year ended.

After what seemed like a short vacation, we returned to Wilmington High, one step away from the honor of being a senior. Mr. Osmond became our loyal and dedicated advisor that year, and after elections in September, Bill Gustus became president; Jackie Micalizzi, vice president; Joan Cuoco, secretary; and Judy Boeri, treasurer. An executive board was also elected to work along with the class officers. Members included: Diane Burke, Jackie Cawthron, Kathy Ingalls, Gail Provenzano, and Betty Woods.

In November, our officers scheduled a slave auction and a very successful cake sale. Shortly afterwards, we began laying out plans for the Junior Variety Show. I'm sure the organizers will never forget all the meetings and parties after school with Mr. Osmond. In March, we held another class meeting to make final plans for the show and to plan Junior Week.

The first day of Junior Week, April thirteenth, was Baby Day. All the babies met on the Common, boldly marched over to the school, and bombarded the principal's office with balloons. Everyone knows that babies only use pennies. The lunch ladies learned this, much to their dismay as they had among their lunch count over seven thousand pennies that day.

Tuesday, April fourteenth, was Dress-up Day. On that same evening at the North Intermediate School, we held our Junior Banquet. Awards for Scholastic achievement and special sports merit were presented to the deserving students.

On Wednesday, we all had the opportunity to be what we had always aspired for. It was Occupation Day. April fifteenth was also the dress rehearsal for the Junior Variety Show.

We had planned for April sixteenth to be the day all Juniors would dress in red. However April 16, 1970, became the first massive skip day in the history of Wilmington High. It was probably the most successful activity a class has ever planned, outside of graduation that is.

Thursday, April seventeenth, was Crazy Day. Whether for our protection, or for the townspeople's or for just plain publicity, we had a police-escorted parade from Weinberg's to the High School. That night we had our first try at our Junior Variety Show. That was a night we will never forget—a night of side-splitting comedy with the lead acts "Romeo and Juliet," "Bad Death," "The Little Kids," "The Bathroom Quintet," and the "Newlywed Game." Following the second run on Saturday Night, there was a cast party at Jackie Cawthron's.

We hardly had a chance to catch our breath before our Junior Prom, "Excalibre," became a reality on April Twenty-fourth. Kathy Sugrue was selected to be queen.

In May, we held our final class meeting. At this time, we elected officers for our senior year. Jackie Micalizzi was chosen president; Lance Platt, vice president; Joan Cuoco, secretary; and Judy Boeri, treasurer. Executive Board members included: Diane Burke, Patty Lawrenson, Kathy Bradly, Jackie Cawthron and Gail Provenzano.

During the summer, our class officers chose Chateau de Ville, on Route One in Saugus, as the site for our prom.

"I sit alone at present dreaming—"

This is the attitude many of us had as we entered school at the beginning of our senior year. Because, although we were approaching the close of our twelfth year, we were beginning to dream about and make arrangements for a new life—a new career.

Mr. Cogan became our class advisor for our final year at Wilmington High. Under his supervision, we held a candy sale in October. Soon afterward under the leadership of Mrs. Gonzales, the senior play, "Born Yesterday," was performed. Cindy Jensen was the assistant director and Ann Stantial, Rick Bahia, Tony DeFrancesco, Bill McGinley, and Jim Theriault were the stars.

The yearbook staff began working diligently at their task. Mr. Hamilton took charge of the staff. Carol Freeman and Jackie Micalizzi were chosen co-editors.

In November, the Wildcats witnessed their third, Merrimack Valley Conference Championship and were also Class C Champions for the first time. Mike Esposito was the state's high scorer in a one year, three year, and four year performance. Hockey was also number one that year in our league.

It is only fair to make mention of our terrific track team with star players Larry Harrington, Carl Cotter, and Mike Esposito. Basketball captains Bill Gustus and Dennis Murphy led their team through an exciting year in '71. The baseball team, with captains Tom Mirasola and Richard Gearty and pitcher Bill Gustus expect to be number one when the season terminates. So, all-in-all, we have witnessed four great years in sports.

We held our last class meeting in April. At this time, we dedicated our yearbook to Mr. Osmond and chose Mr. Lynch as Teacher of the Year.

We are now in the fourth act of our play. Unfortunately, the majority of seniors did not choose to stay to see it through. May fourteenth was sign out day.

Our Senior Prom, "The Night Before The Morning After," was held on June fourth and a great time was had by all. June ninth was our annual Senior Banquet. Graduation was held on Sunday, June thirteenth.

One very long chapter has just closed, a chapter full of many, many memories and experiences—some a little sad, some very happy. When we read about a nation's history, we are able to see their mistakes and pattern our future accordingly. May our history serve as a precedent to a hopeful and beautiful future.
